

SAYS JEALOUS MAN SLEW DANCER FOR TAKING HER HOME

Clare of Manhattan Victim of Jim Cassidy, Girl Tells Police.

The midnight platoon was leaving the Fourth street station in Long Island City early this morning when the report of a revolver shot followed by the screams of several girls sounded from around the corner. Policeman James J. Kennedy and several others ran to No. 34 Third street, in front of which stood two young men and a girl. Another girl lay on the sidewalk and nearly dead. Clare, a dancer, shot dead. She had danced all evening at Kennedy's Park, Jackson avenue and the Greenboro Bridge Plaza, with a 20-year-old Mary McGee, the girl who had fainted, and as he left her door, No. 34 Third street, two youths had accosted the couple and one had shot Clare. Miss McGee accused James Cassidy, who was arrested at his home. She says jealousy was the cause.
They started home about midnight, according to the girl's story. Clare, according to Miss McGee while Mary Marino was behind with Joseph C. Sullivan of No. 21 Sullivan street and Elias Ellison of No. 123 Ninth street. They had reached Miss McGee's house when Cassidy and McGee came along. Cassidy, she says, raised his revolver and fired. The police are searching for McGee, and when he is found he and Cassidy will be arraigned in the Long Island City Police Court for a preliminary hearing at which they probably will be held for the Coroner's inquest.

GRANDMA'S COMMENT.
(From the Detroit Free Press.)
"I gave him the real shocker."
"That's what comes of having your dress cut so low. I knew your shoulders would get cold."
